

SOME OF THE BENEFITS THAT RESULT FROM THE ROTARY CLUB

To the Community:

It influences the creation of friendly environment in the community, by means of the promotion of affable companionship and mutual consideration.

Contributes to obliteration of divisions by the creation of a common meeting place, and by its appeal to more generous feelings.

Cooperates with other local organizations and invigorates them by such cooperation.

It is a group that strives to develop a spirit of cordial cooperation in handling of affairs concerning public welfare.

It is a group inside of which there are no parties or sects, capable of winning over popular support in favor of public betterment regardless of their origin.

It serves as a preparatory field for constructive and directing leadership - something of inestimable value for any community.

It is in a position by means of its Rotary contacts to take advantage of the experience gained in other centers in the interest of public betterment.

It links the community in a world-wide chain of cities in almost eighty countries in which there are Rotary clubs, affording in this way world ties and keeping it abreast of world progress.

To the Rotarian:

It offers to the Rotarian new and better opportunities to translate into deeds his aspirations to be useful to his fellow-men.

It is constantly widening the group of friends of the Rotarians.

It increases the Rotarian's knowledge in business and professional matters differing from its own, and places him in a position to understand in a sympathetic way the problems of others.

It encourages and supports the Rotarian in managing his business, or in exercising his profession in harmony with the highest standards.

It serves as an ideal means for developing the Rotarian's ability and capacity to their utmost - (more than one person has found new interests and new activities through the Rotary Club).

It offers to the Rotarian friendly relations and a cordial welcome in every important city in the world.

It increases the Rotarian's knowledge of world affairs; it places him in a position to appreciate the real character of peoples.

It offers the Rotarian the opportunity to express in a practical way the noble aspirations that hearten every man who wants to contribute to society's betterment.

It offers the Rotarian the satisfaction of taking part in a movement tending to achieve international understandings.